Sayyid Al-Hakeem Meets Kyokushinkai Fighters, Stresses Emulating the Prophet of Humanity and Recognizes Sports as a Pillar of Societal Growth

In a gathering marked by faith and patriotism, Sayyid Ammar Al-Hakeem, Head of the National State Powers Alliance, met with a group of Kyokushinkai athletes, extending condolences on the anniversary of the passing of Prophet Mohammed (peace be upon him and his family). H.E. praised the Prophet’s lofty status as the embodiment of human perfection and the bearer of an eternal reformist message founded on truth and justice.

H.E. affirmed that the Prophet stands as the ultimate role model for all who strive for reform and the development of humanity. H.E. emphasized the need to follow the Prophet’s moral and ethical example, drawing inspiration from his determination, perseverance, patience, and steadfastness in facing challenges, especially as he carried the message of monotheism from a harsh environment devoid of civilization’s foundations, armed only with unwavering faith and pure intention.

H.E. also highlighted the vital role of sports in promoting values of tolerance and discipline, underscoring that it is a universal message proving that great achievements can only be realized through hard work and persistence. H.E. called for empowering athletes and sports representatives in decision-making positions to ensure this vital sector thrives and drives positive change.

On the political front, H.E. stressed the importance of the upcoming elections and the necessity of broad, informed participation, describing them as a decisive step between the current stability and sustainable stability. H.E. urged voters to choose qualified and ethical candidates from credible electoral lists, cautioning against supporting those who spend excessively on campaigns far beyond the legal entitlements of a parliamentarian, raising legitimate questions about the sources and motives behind such spending.
